

ARCTIC ANTHROPOLOGY

Founded by Chester S. Chard

Vol. 41

2004

No. 1

CONTENTS

The Use of Plants as Regular Food in Ancient Subarctic Economies: A Case Study Based on Sami Use of Scots Pine Inner Bark	Ingela Bergman, Lars Östlund, and Olle Zackrisson	1
Colonizing the Kodiak Archipelago: Trends in Raw Material Use and Lithic Technologies at the Tanginak Spring Site	Ben Fitzhugh	14
Earliest Mesolithic Site in Northern Norway? A Reassessment of Sarnes B4	H. P. Blankholm	41
The Atna' and the Political Ecology of the Copper River Fishery, Alaska	Davin L. Holen	58
Horizons of Sustainability in Greenland: Inuit Landscapes of Memory and Vision	Frank Sejersen	71
Going to the Birds: Examining the Importance of Avian Resources to Pre-Dorset Subsistence Strategies on Southern Baffin Island	S. Brooke Milne and Sarah M. Donnelly	90

Cover illustration: Winter habitation with wood chopper at work, from an ivory pipe collected in Norton Sound, Alaska. Walter J. Hoffman, The Graphic Art of the Eskimos, pp. 739–968. In The Annual Report of the United States National Museum for 1865, Washington, D.C.